BRIAN WALL: "No matter how exotic human civilization becomes, no matter the developments of life and society nor the complexity of the machine/human interface, there always come interludes of time when the course of humankind,
the very future of humankind, depends upon the relatively simple actions of single individuals."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

As the song goes, Karen Fennell comes from "... the land down under." She lives on Tasmania, an island which is located off the southeast coast of mainland Australia. Coming from a city, the adjustment to life on the Cape has presented a challenge to Karen whose bright, outgoing personality has become familiar to many of us. Upon her return to Tasmania, she will enter a university where she would like to study English or Drama.

Jörg Esleben is amused when people ask him about his home "town", Cologne. It is one of the largest cities in West Germany, and extremely different from the small town of Brewster. George, as most of us have chosen to call him, ignoring the two tiny dots over the "o" in his name, feels this year in the United States has been most important in improving his English. Jorg has enjoyed his time spent here and has commented, not sarcastically, on the amount of school spirit displayed at Nauset!

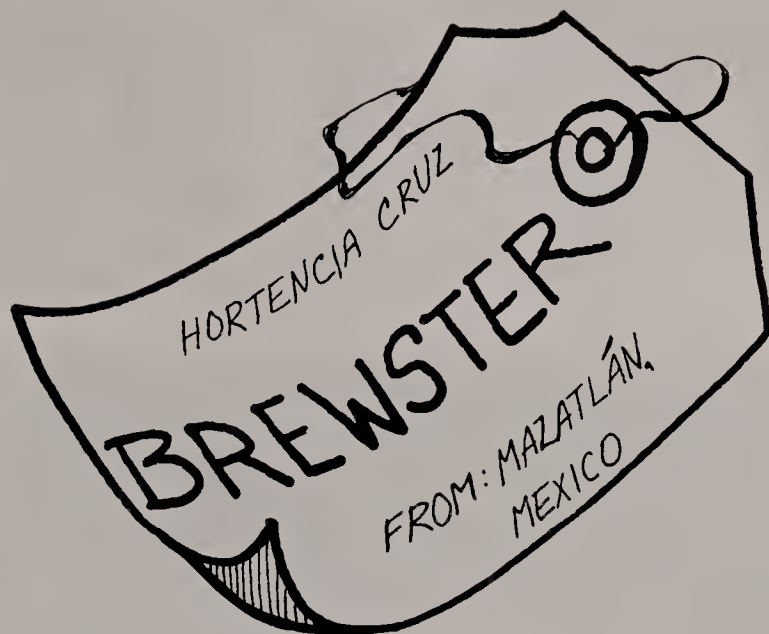

SCHULER AUSTAUSCH

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

As some of you know, Kevin Eagar spent his summer in Greece last year. He lived in Athens and was able to travel to several other cities and islands. During the summer Kevin became more aware of political and social issues. His perspective on life and the importance of language has broadened. Looking back on his summer Kevin sees the AFS experience "as a rewarding and personally expanding adventure", which he hopes many more students will discover and take advantage of.

This year's Rotary exchange student is Hortencia Cruz, who comes from Mazatlan, Mexico. She feels her experience has improved her knowledge of the American lifestyle. Hortencia has noticed how helpful the students at Nauset have been and hopes to return someday. Yet, the only thing keeping her away may be the "COLD" winter weather! Returning to Mexico she will have one more year in secondary school and then attend a university where she plans to study Political Science.

At times you frown in disapproval,
At others you smile in delight.
You shared your knowledge willingly,
Trying to expand our minds.
At that moment we did not appreciate,
But later we realized:
You saw us through our troubles.
You showed us thought and understanding . . .

Thank you.

*To build a castle in the sand
is to give shape to dreams.
With childlike joy we take the time,
We mold, we carve, we scheme.*

*And what we build so strong and firm, so big, so free, so grand,
stands perched upon the open shore,
no marble place, just sand.*

*We know the winds and tides will come
and wash it all away.
But we have dreamed and built and grown
on this, a sand-spent day.*

*Here, too, we all have gathered grains
of smiles, of dreams, of giving,
and built along a shore of friends
a castle made of living.*

*Our memories are like shovelfuls
of laughter, love, and more,
No winds or waves can wash away
when we have left the shore.*
